MONTBLANC MAGIC FOR THE HOLIDAY SEASON

This holiday season brings us an opportunity to reflect on the experience of recent months, while finding the comfort of joy and gratitude among the ones we love.

Get into the holiday spirit and be inspired by a specially curated selection of meaningful and thoughtful gifts; collections defined by innovation, elegance and aspirational design that capture the artistry of Montblanc's craftsmanship. Beyond their promise of reliability and performance, each of our lifetime companions is designed to be part of the special journey of those leaving their mark on the world, pursuing what moves them with passion and purpose.

Gifting Montblanc to someone special is joining us in our mission to inspire others to express their full potential. Montblanc pieces grow with those who receive them, and become part of their accomplishments. Gifts that not only tell others how much we believe in them, but inspire them to do exceptional things every day.

As we recharge and look with hope to the year ahead,
we wish you a warm and happy holiday season.

Timepieces

The Montblanc watchmaking story began in 1858, when Charles-Yvan Robert founded his workshop in Villeret, in the Swiss Jura Mountains. Though he didn't realize it at the time, this marked the beginning of the historic Minerva era. Over the century-and-a-half that followed, Minerva would become one of the world's leading specialists in precision chronometry for professionals.

Montblanc

A true watchmaker, since 1858

By the 1880s, the manufacture had built a solid reputation for innovation with pocket watches that were wound with the crown, leaving traditional winding keys behind. And that was just the beginning. Minerva then turned its focus to precision timing, becoming a leading specialist in the fabrication of professional pocket watches and stopwatches. It began with a line of monopusher chronographs, culminating in 1916 with the production of a stopwatch accurate to 1/100th of a second. Just a few years later Minerva invented the calibre 13.20, one of the first manually wound monopusher chronographs ever developed for wristwatches, marking a new chapter in the manufacture's history. Around a decade later, the legendary calibre 17.29 made its debut - one of the slimmest monopusher chronographs, measuring just 5.6 mm in height.

The original Minerva ateliers remain abuzz with activity, today serving as the Montblanc Manufacture in Villeret. Every component is carefully crafted and decorated by hand, even including the balance springs. The manufacture is one of a very selected few around the world in which the watchmakers have the know-how to produce their own balance springs entirely by hand. Length is measured not with today's electronics, but by well-trained eyes, in accordance with tradition, for utmost accuracy.

Mountain Exploring

1920 - 1930

From military chronograph to exploration

Back in the 1920s, Minerva produced several watches designed for mountain exploration and military use featuring movements such as the 19.09, 13.20, and 17.29. Today's Montblanc 1858 timepieces take inspiration from the world of mountain exploration, expressing the trend of getting back to nature, reinterpreting the Minerva pocket watches and chronographs.
