

Celebrate 150 years of IWC with Greater Rewards

For 150 years, IWC has married advanced American production technologies with the skilled craftsmanship of Swiss watchmakers. Each distinctive IWC watch family attests to the innovation of four generations of Schaffhausen engineers.

To celebrate this milestone in their history, IWC has released the limited-edition 'Jubilee' collection. All the watches in this collection, despite being from different families, are unified by white or blue dials with a unique lacquered finish.

Innovative Design Ahead of its Time

In 1884, IWC manufactured the first so-called Pallweber pocket watches, showing the hours and minutes in a digital format with large numerals on rotating discs. In its anniversary year, IWC honours this pioneering achievement with the IWC Tribute to Pallweber Edition "150 Years". Limited to just 25 watches, it has a platinum case, a white dial with a lacquered finish, and blue display discs. The IWC-manufactured 94200 calibre has a 60-hour power reserve, thanks to the uninfluenced flow of power in the main wheel train.
